

Dear Readers,

Being a parent can be one of the most rewarding experiences. After having a child of my own I realise this and can vouch for this statement. The whole journey of pregnancy to parenthood is a unique occurrence in one's life. It changes so many things of a person's life, be it the way one thinks, analyses, and sets his or her priorities (I refer to both the father and the mother). It's a beautiful journey of emotions which makes a person more patient, tolerant and practical at the same time. Above all, the joy and happiness which enters one's life is invaluable.

But there are so many couples out there who are not blessed in this regard or rather need the help of homeopathy to get that bliss and happiness which the human being longs for, the happiness of having your own child.

Technically speaking, if a person is above the age of 30 the physician needs to do all the necessary investigations to find the cause of non- conception and then plan the treatment. Even if the main line of treatment would be the constitutional medicine but it's important to know what you are treating or what has been treated once your patient has conceived. In 40% of the cases the male partner would need treatment but the requirement of treating the female partner as well in such cases should be considered if there are any emotional issues with her.

It's important that the physician take proper history (including the past diseases, gynecological problems and emotional aspects), do the required physical examination, and call for the necessary investigations to ascertain the cause.

Of all the so called cases of infertility, a large percentage of it is treatable by homeopathy. Cases of endometriosis, non-ovulation, PCOD, oligospermia, sperm allergy, repeated miscarriage, unexplained infertility and many such cases have scope in homeopathy. There are a lot of remedies which are mentioned in the Materia Medica for the treatment of such cases and many doctors have also documented cases which proves this. In the present issue, we have included a lot case records which document how homeopathic remedies have helped such patients. In the old archives section, there is a very interesting article by Wesley Newport on the same subject.

In the research section we are starting a series of articles from Dr Valavan, which will throw light on the research aspects of the homeopathy field. There is very interesting article by Dr Dora Pachova of Bulgaria where she has given a new aspect to homeopathic treatment by not just talking about the remedy of the patient but importance of understanding the circumstances of the family which create the present state of the patient. She emphasizes that how important it is to subtly enlighten the patients family members about the situation which has lead to these states which need treatment as otherwise the patients will keep coming back to you with the situations acting as maintaining cause. The news and events section has details of the upcoming C.A.S.H seminars. Catch up the one happening in your vicinity and be in touch with the latest updates on the ways of practice. C.A.S.H targets to make the best of teachers and practitioners of homeopathy reach your cities and give you an opportunity to learn from them. We are bringing the query section again with Dr Joe Kellerstein from Canada, who will be answering all your queries related to homeopathy practice. Send in your queries, feedback and thoughts for what you would like to read in your own journal.
